From 1982 until 1990 I worked full time at Eastside Mental Health first starting and then running the domestic violence program there.

8 years x 52 weeks per year = 416 weeks

In those 8 years I averaged between three and five two hour groups per week. If we average that out to four groups per week for fifty weeks per year for eight years, that would be 200 groups per year.

Thus 416 weeks x 4 groups per week = 1,664 groups

At 2 hours per group = 3,328

Also in those 416 weeks I conducted an average of two intakes and two exit interviews per week for a total of 4 hours of individual sessions per week.

416 x 4 = 1,664 hours

Thus for my eight years at Eastside Mental Health Center, under the supervision of psychiatrists and clinical psychologists, was 3,328 hours of group + 1664 hours of individual, = 4,992 hours of supervised face to face hours with offenders/clients.

I have been in private practice doing, among other things, DV work, since 1990. Thus, since this is early in 2011 that would be ten years.

The smallest number of groups I had per week in that period was two groups per week ws two and the largest was five. That means an average of 3.5 groups per week.

20 years x 52 weeks per year = 1,040 weeks

1,040 weeks x 3.5 groups per week = 3,640 groups

3,640 groups x 1.5 hours/group = 5,460 hours of group

During that time WAC 388-60 was passed requiring six months of monthly followup sessions, which I do individually. My guess is that a low estimate would be two per week.

1,040 weeks x 2 individual sessions per week @ 1 hour each = 2,080 hours of individual.

Thus I have 5,460 + 2080 hours = 7,540 in private practice

Thus I have

Eastside Mental Health	4,992 hours
Private Practice	7,540 hours
Total	12,532 hours

Please let me know if this is sufficient

Sincerely,

Doug Bartholomew MS
